SUPPORTING EQUALITY: BRIDGING THE GAP BEYOND BLACK HISTORY MONTH THROUGH SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOAL #10

Toronto, Ontario, Canada, February 29, 2024, Support Black Charities (SBC), a leading Canadian non-profit organization based in Toronto but operating nationally and internationally, proudly announces its commitment to bridging the gap during Black History Month. This initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goal #10 (SDG #10), aiming to reduce inequalities and foster impactful work within the black ecosystem.

Anick Silencieux, the visionary founder of SBC, embodies a steadfast dedication to empowering marginalized communities. Her ethos, deeply rooted in her journey from volunteer to founder, has propelled the establishment of SBC as a robust global network uniting donors, volunteers, and organizations dedicated to uplifting black communities worldwide.

“We Don’t Win Unless Everybody Wins!” Anick Silencieux shares, reflecting on her journey.

This mantra encapsulates the essence of her tireless efforts to elevate the black community’s voice and create impactful change globally, as she reiterates the need to address the disparity in funding between organizations.

A Vision of Impact:

Anick’s relentless commitment to community welfare materialized through volunteering with other organizations like Diversity in Aquatics, Ready Aiders Foundation, Black Girl Hockey Club, and Black Screen Office. These organizations are making significant strides in their respective fields, from promoting water safety and aquatic activities to dismantling anti-Black racism in Canada’s screen industries.

Black-led organizations are the linchpins of support for communities battling systemic inequality. Despite their indispensable contributions, these organizations need help garnering support and recognition, often hampering their outreach and impact. Recognizing this, SBC stands shoulder-to-shoulder with these organizations, striving to break barriers and catalyze enduring change.

Anick’s vision for SBC includes providing essential resources through tailored programs to foster sustainability, self-sufficiency, and empowerment among black-led organizations to create a generational impact on the black ecosystem. This endeavour amplifies the voices of black-led organizations and creates vital connections with donors, amplifying their effect.

Promoting Awareness and Action:

Raising awareness about inequality is pivotal. Readers can take practical steps:

Educate themselves: Learn about historical and current inequalities.

Engage in conversations: Challenge stereotypes and biases.

Support organizations: Contribute to non-profits like SBC through donations, volunteering, or advocacy.

Donate: A small donation can make a big difference!

During Black History Month and beyond, participate in SBC's initiatives. Attend events, share their mission, and actively engage. By doing so, you become part of the solution.

A Call to Action:

As we honor Black History Month in February and beyond, let's celebrate the resilience, creativity, and enduring contributions of the Black community. Anick Silencieux and Support Black Charities exemplify how non-profits can bridge gaps, promote equality, and drive positive change. By aligning with SDG #10, they inspire us all to work collectively toward a more inclusive world. Let us commit to reducing inequality, fostering empathy, and creating a brighter future for everyone.

SBC proudly collaborates with and supports various B3 organizations through GBPI. It is a testament to SBC's unwavering commitment to redressing the disparity in philanthropic funding for Black-led organizations.
